the THEATER of PUBLIC POLICY

What happens when you combine laughter with life-changing missions? You get The Theater of Public Policy, a group of performers who have a background in mission-driven nonprofit work and also have a love (a knack even!) for improv comedy. Established in 2011, the group has performed more than 300 shows, toured the nation, hosted candidate debate forums, and more. Now they are putting their talents to work for another mission-driven organization, MRCI. Just like MRCI's person-centered programming, no two performances by The Theater of Public Policy are the same. The results, though, are: smiles all around.

Whose Line Is It Mankato? is an improvised performance where two teams compete in a fun game-night-style Improv battle. Everything is made up on the spot.

Curious to know which celebrity community members will share the stage with our professional Improv group as contestants? Here's a sneak peek of the contestants:
